Local Pupils Visit Augusta

As a concluding activity to the class study of Maine, a trip to Augusta was planned and carried out by the eighth grade class at the Crescent Park School. Through the very helpful cooperation of parents and friends of the class, the trip was successfully completed. Both Representative Ferguson and Senator Carter helped immeasurably in suggesting activities of interest to the students.

The day following the trip, each class member submitted a written report on the excursion. The following reports were selected by the class as good summaries of the trip.

The class wishes to thank all those persons whose great help made this trip possible.

On April 15th, the 8th grade room of the Crescent Park School, under the supervision of Mr. Chapman and Mrs. Lurvey, went on a trip of fun and education to Augusta. We started around 7:30 and reached the Capitol in Augusta around 9:30.

The children took pictures of the Capitol and of the liberty bell outside. Then we went inside of the huge building and looked at the flags of ancient wars and the pictures of the great men of Maine that were in the Capitol.

Second we went to the House around and show us the different of Representatives, where bills were being passed. Then we were introduced to Mr. Ferguson by Mr. Chapman.

Next we went into the Senate and saw them in session. We also saw our senator, John Carter, at about 11:30 we met Governor Cross who was introduced to us by Mrs. Lurvey. Pictures were taken of the Governor by Dennis Robertson and Walter Kittredge. Then we went into the heart of Augusta and had our dinner.

About 1:30 or so we went out to Fort Warren, a place of historical scenes. There we saw all of the tools for fighting wars and for working. There were bits of old furniture of great age. After spending from 30 to 45 minutes there we went to the Maine State Police Barracks.

There was a man to take us around and show us the different rooms, and what each room contained. After we had been through and had taken pictures of the Trooper we were off to Northeast Airlines outside of Augusta. We just rode around the camps, then headed toward home. When we got to South Paris we stopped for a lunch at Goodwin's Dairy.

Soon we were home, arriving about 6 o'clock.

I don't think we have ever been on a trip as a class as interesting and exciting as going to Augusta.

There were forty pupils and twelve parents as chaperones. As each one was glad to be home because we were tired, but I don't think the trip to Augusta will ever be forgotten by Richard Fover.

Trip to Augusta

On Wednesday, April 15th, the eighth grade of Bethel Crescent Park School left for a trip to Augusta. Fifty-one children including chaperones left in eight individual cars at 7:30 a. m. and arrived at Capitol Hill, Augusta, at 9:30.

We were cordially welcomed by both the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House. We saw the many books and files in the Library and were delighted to meet Mr. Ferguson and Governor Cross. We left Capitol Hill at noon and ate dinner in the city.

Eisenhower's "Right Arm"

WASHINGTON — In the midst of my conversation with Sherman Adams in the White House, just across the executive offices from the President's work-a-day office, a telephone at his elbow rang. He excused himself, "I have a trans-Atlantic call coming," he explained. The man came on an American with business holdings in Europe. Adams told him that the President and several assistants had been discussing him for a particular job for which he had outstanding qualifications. Would he, asked Adams, consider coming to Washington and working with the Eisenhower team for a while? The President felt he was the best man available anywhere on earth to handle the assignment. The man's request for a few days to consider the appeal was readily granted by Adams, who is chief of the President's executive staff. Neither the nature of the job nor the salary was mentioned. The incident seemed to me to dramatically demonstrate the effort being made by the present administration to obtain the best men available for important jobs. As I sat in other Cabinet-rank offices, I heard similar telephone conversations.

"Toughest Job"

Meeting Sherman Adams in the White House was an interesting experience. I had been told by friends in Washington that he has the toughest job in the Eisenhower administration. He is in every sense of the word, "assistant president." His office is within a few steps of the President's and a large portion of his work is of presidential caliber.

As the No. 1 executive assistant and confidant of the President, Adams handles duties and functions which ordinarily would be handled personally by Mr. Eisenhower. By placing reliance on him and giving him as much authority as he needs, the President is much freer to devote his time to the tremendous problems of national and international character.

The Ex-Lumberjack

Sherman Adams is slight in build but his vigor and endurance are legendary. He has one of the strongest jaws I've ever seen, and his character seems to be built to match the jaw. He is courteous and has a lively sense of humor, but in his executive responsibilities in the White House he is all business. This is in character with his past business and political careers.

Born in Vermont and reared in Rhode Island, he early developed a liking for the outdoors, especially the mountain country. He moved to New Hampshire when he entered Dartmouth in 1916. After serving in the U. S. Marine Corps in World War I, he chose the lumber industry as a career. Eventually he was a lumberjack, scaler, foreman, lumber foreman, plant manager and operational manager for a big New England paper and lumber concern. The devastating fire in the fall of 1926 left him a fortune of $100,000. He then turned to a career in real estate, and in 1931 he was elected to the U. S. House of Representatives. He served in the 67th and 68th Congresses, and then came back to the White House in 1945.

His "career" and the way he backed it made a bit with New Hampshire people. In 1940 he was elected Governor, and when candidate Eisenhower called him as his No. 1 aide to the presidential campaign following the Chicago convention, Governor Sherman Adams was serving the last few months of his second term and looking forward to retiring from public life. But the so many of the men now working with the new President in Washington, he was "satisfied" with the ability, the political philosophy, and the character of the man who had been his friend and neighbor. Adams was an every step of his 40,000 mile campaign back and forth across the country. And it was noted that the two worked in almost perfect harmony as a team. Adams received as perhaps the most intimate associate and adviser of Eisenhower, and with his characteristic determination to "make the thing through," he accepted the task of being the President's chief executive assistant, handling over 100,000 letters and 10,000 calls a day. He and Mr. Eisenhower felt that the President's "right arm" would be of greatest value to the new administration.

DALE CARNEGIE

★ AUTHOR OF "HOW TO STOP WORRYING AND START LIVING" ★

D. R. SLATER M. DOZIER, 532 Knollwood Drive, Falls Church, Virginia, says he always has been a chronic worrier and was rather proud of it. When he first began practicing medicine, he many times found himself unable to sleep because of worry about his patients. He made a vigorous effort to determine the cause of his unrest and discovered that cases which worried him most were the ones in which he had not been as thorough as he should have been.

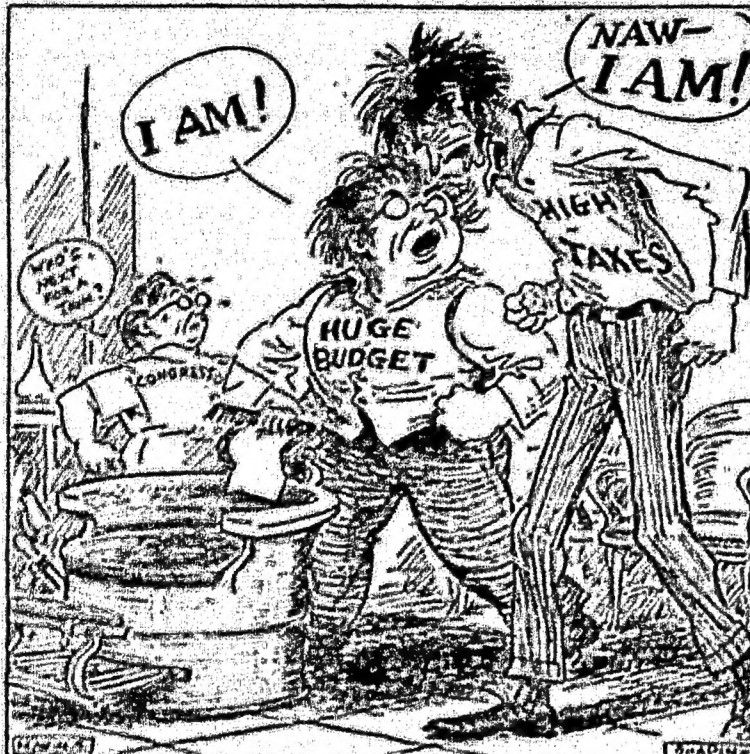

CARNEGIE

Thereafter, when this situation occurred, he would dress and go to the patient telling him he happened to be in his section of town and decided to see how he was feeling. If no lights were burning in those small town homes, he did not bother to stop as he knew all was well. However, if there were lights burning, he went into the home and even if it required three or more hours to complete a thorough job of diagnosis and to explain proper treatment, he remained in that home until the job was completed to his satisfaction. The employment of this method always enabled him to sleep like a child when he finally went to bed.

He believes that the presence of worry is an indication that a person is serious, conscientious and deeply concerned with the problems which confront him, but that by learning to control and direct worry we are driven onward to better, more perfect attainments. However, if we do not control worry, it can produce an emotional situation within us which will lead to frustration, misery and ill health, and determine whether we are happy and a success, or miserable and a failure.

happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare

"Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

So states the First Amendment to the Constitution. This is the guarantee that we may say and print what we believe to be true, and that in addition we have the right to attempt to convert other people to our ideas in other words, to influence public opinion.

Even so, a general statement of principle no matter how unequivocal is subject to interpretation. In a specific instance is involved. A case which was just decided by the Supreme Court — and which may have historic significance — is at hand here.

In 1938, House of Representatives committee conducted an investigation of lobbying. Among the witnesses summoned was Dr. Edward A. Rumbold, executive secretary of an organization known as the Committee for Constitutional Government. This organization had published and sold books which were extremely critical of New Deal philosophies, policies, and acts. The House was ordered to disclose the names of people who had bought books to the value of $200 or more. He refused. The House, by a narrow vote which generally followed partisan lines, cited him for contempt of Congress. He was found guilty in a Federal District Court and sentenced to a $1,000 fine and a six-months prison sentence, the latter being suspended.

Dr. Rumbold appealed, and the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed his conviction, citing the First Amendment. The Government then took the case to the Supreme Court.

A short time ago this court of last resort held, by a 7 to 6 vote with two Justices not participating, that Dr. Rumbold was not guilty, on the grounds that the resolution under which the lobbying committee acted did not empower an investigation into publishing activities. But Justice Douglas, with Justice Black concurring, went much farther in a separate opinion. He dealt with the constitutional issue involved. Here, in part, is what he said: "If the present inquiry were sanctioned the press would be subjected to harassment in practical effect might be as serious as censorship. A requirement that a publisher disclose the names of the purchasers of his publications, the free press as we know it disappears."

"Then the specter of a government agent will look over the shoulder of everyone who reads."

The purchase of a book or pamphlet today may result in a subpoena tomorrow. . . . The books and pamphlets that are critical of the administration, that preach an unpopular policy in domestic or foreign affairs, that are in dispute in the orthodox school of thought will be suspect and subject to investigation. . . .

"If the lady from Toledo can be required to disclose what she read yesterday and what she will read tomorrow, fear will take the place of freedom in the libraries, bookstores, and homes of the land. Through the harassment of hearings, investigations, reports, and subpoenas government will hold a club over speech and over the press."

Justice Douglas' opinion did not make many headlines. But it may be remembered long after some of the best-publicized events of today are forgotten.

"Last year the government appeared to give a great deal to the states but it gave them 5 hundred million dollars less than it took from them. That 500 million does not run the government; it is just the cost of handling the states' own money." — Farm Bureau in Maine.

It is difficult to imagine more convincing proof of Chevrolet's superiority, for such clear-cut and overwhelming preference can lead to but one conclusion: Chevrolet trucks must be better, must enjoy solid advantages over other trucks. Such preference must rest on a firm foundation of good, sound value. And, of course, it does—as owners of Chevrolet trucks can testify. So before you buy any truck, see how much more Chevrolet trucks offer you. Stop in and see us soon. Continuation of standard equipment and trim illustrated is dependent on availability of material.
